For a truly effective method of testing your dog's agility, the BarkPark Stepping Paws are the best for the job. The kit consists of five stepping pods, which can be arranged in such a way that your dog has to either jump or step from each platform while they decrease or increase in height and distance apart along the way. With regular practice, your dog's agility will be tested and improved, or you could just use them as a fun part of obstacle training to help develop their balance. Each stepping pod has been treated with CanineCoat, which provides them with a superior slip-resistant traction when in contact with your dog's paws so, whether they step or jump, they won't fall off. The in-ground mounting also means that they won't wobble or shift under your pet's weight.
