Riding tricycles is an important part of a young child's development. Not only does it help to strengthen their muscles and develop coordination, but it also provides a step in the right direction to learning how to ride a regular bike. However, some riding surfaces are uneven or debris covered, leading to possible injury. The Atlanta Crazy Eight Pedal Path is designed to provide a safe, even surface for trike riding. The large size and fun shape allow several children to enjoy pedaling around at once. The path is available with or without stripes, bringing a bit of realism to play time. You can also add imaginative play elements and accessories along side the Atlanta Crazy Eight Pedal Path to create a street that features road signs and every day locations to stop at along the way. This Pedal Path is shipped with an entrance and exit section so trikes can be easily guided on and off the path.
