The Three Panel Craggy Peak Climber boasts five different surfaces for children to climb on. There are three rotomolded climbing panels, each distinctly shaped and patterned with realistic-looking rocky surfaces and edges and adorned with plastic hand grips. These panels curve and taper off on the end of the structure for added stability, visual appeal, and a more interesting climbing challenge. Additionally, this climber comes with two sections of painted metal bars, which offer children even more ways to play. The size of this structure, as well as the number of different surfaces, allows it to accommodate several school-aged children at once. It is specially designed to provide plenty of space for lateral climbing without too much vertical height, so that children have plenty of space to climb uninterrupted without the risk of falling from dangerous heights.
