The Six Panel Craggy Horn Climber is one of our longest climbing walls of its type, with six sections of plastic rock walls all making up one continuous façade. The wall tapers down and curves at both ends, which saves some space to limit the required safe usage zone and help it fit more easily into existing play areas while also adding to its visual and playtime appeal. A structure of this size is perfect for kids to chase each other around or hide behind—and there are even holes and spaces for them to peek through while they do. Additionally, there are two sections of curious geometric ladders which make up parts of the wall, and two curved ladders buttressing it which are connected to sturdy galvanized support posts, all of which offer exciting alternative pathways up or around the wall. The Six Panel Craggy Horn Climber is sure to become a favorite part of any playground.
