The addition of infrastructure for bicycle parking is a simple, yet all too often overlooked, feature that improves any building or outdoor area that people might be interested in biking to. Models like this Wave Style Bike Rack are inexpensive, unobtrusive, and easy to install, which is why there is little reason not to include one anywhere. This model can accommodate anywhere from five to 11 bikes at once, offering each of them two secure points of contact where locks can be fastened. The wave shape also prevents a row of bikes from knocking each other down like dominoes, which can cause serious damage to wheels and spokes. It is almost entirely made of recycled metals, which are galvanized to protect them from corrosion. The plain finish looks fine as is, but a range of 20 color options are available if you would prefer it to have a powder coating of weatherproof paint.
