The Catwalk Adventure Net Bridge is a simple playground structure which young children are sure to love. It resembles a rickety rope bridge that one might find hanging over a perilous ravine in the heart of the jungle. However, the Catwalk Adventure Net Bridge could not be safer (that is assuming you do not install it above an actual ravine). This makes it a perfect obstacle for brave children to conquer during their imaginary adventures. The ropes are woven from strong but flexible synthetic fibers, which make the whole structure highly stable while still allowing the steps to wobble slightly for a little bit of a balancing challenge. There are four strong galvanized steel posts supporting the structure. The raised step in the middle also adds a twist, so that crossing the bridge will feel a little bit different each time. Fortunately, there are stable ropes on each side of the bridge which act as hand-rails, so that even if the steps shake, the child won't have to worry about falling over.
