Kids will delight in watching water flow back and forth as it races downstream through the Zigzag Triple Water Trough. This clever play activity uses water from an ordinary garden hose, which travels past a series of dams and into a drainage basin at the end. This water can then be re-used for other purposes to teach children an important lesson about conservation. Having three troughs means there is plenty of room for larger groups of children to play. The troughs are even ADA accessible and made from recycled plastic. Both portable and in-ground mounts are available for this structure.
