The Handring Maze lets children swing back and forth as they navigate from one side of the structure to the other. The ten hand rings allow movement in multiple directions. And since there are so many of them, more than one child can play on the structure at the same time. This is a great way for kids to develop their arm muscles and build up their upper body strength while having a good time. The swinging motion of the rings makes the Handring Maze more challenging and exciting than a traditional overhead ladder. The sturdy support posts that hold up each corner of the structure can be ordered in your choice of recycled metal or wood.
