This play Stove is the perfect way for children to act out home scenarios and pretend to cook. Unlike a real stove, this toy model is made completely safe for children to play with. Not only does it not have any heating element, it also has no sharp corners for kids to bump into, and full length hinges on the doors, which don't pinch kids' fingers. The wooden stove has four top burners, with four knobs that appear to control their heat. It also has a timer and temperature knob for the oven. The oven doors swing open and closed easily, and even have a clear plastic window through which children can watch their meals 'cook'. This Stove is a perfect way for children to learn the basics of cooking, without any of the danger of working with a real stove, or the messiness of working with real ingredients.
