

Adventures in Growing Beta

MSRP $10,668.00

SALE $9,068.00

Highlights:

- Bongos that let kids practice music
- Attractive panel shapes on climber and stairs
- A short slide that won't intimidate smaller kids
- Arch climber features lettered steps to help with alphabet learning

Age Group: 6 to 23 months

Capacity: 8

Unit Size: 11' x 6'

Use Zone: 24' x 19'

Adventures in Grown Beta is an optimally condensed playground structure and activity center that's been built to match the needs of the youngest children. The smaller height makes for an easy climb up one of two directions to a central tower room. Youngsters can either scale up an arch climber that's decorated with eye-catching letters or they can ascend via a number stamped staircase. So they'll have a chance to learn when rising up. Both these paths lead to a cozy central room that then leads directly to the gentle descent of the slide. That room also has a sizable viewing panel to let parents or teaches see inside to watch how kids are behaving. And for kiddos disinterested in the physical play, there are several options to occupy their time. A set of bongos can be played to provide musical accompaniment to the children sliding. Or those on the ground might instead find the noise making sound cylinder or the visually exciting spinning shape knobs to be more to their liking. This set is available in either primary or natural colors.