The Medium Infant Exploratorium is an ideal playspace for young children aged 6 to 23 months who are starting to develop the ability to move around on their own. Activity centers in this line are built to encourage children to explore the interior of the walled space as part of a journey through a simple maze. This maze is easily solvable as it features few turns and several exits. Kids' wandering through the Exploratorium are further diverted by the excellent interactive activities that are built into many of the panels that make up its walls. One child might have their travels temporarily stopped by the entrancing image of their own reflection in a mirror. Another little one will be struck by another panel's assembly of colorful spinning shapes. Regardless of what game strikes children's fancy, parents can breathe a sigh of relief that the youngsters are safe thanks to the open aired top of the enclosure that lets adults monitor the little ones inside.
