It's a race to the bottom with the 5-foot Double Curve Slide which emboldens children to test their height trepidations together. Children will walk up the transfer stairs, which is wide enough for two children to walk up together and has rails for extra safety and stability as they walk up. As they reach the top of the slide they diverge onto one of the two conjoined slides. As they slope down the slide they will feel a bolt of exhilaration as they hit the slight curve towards the bottom. This is an Independent Play item as it functions as a standalone structure that does not need to be connected to a play system. This allows it to be placed almost anywhere on the playground as long as nothing else encroaches its use zone. The 5-foot Double Curve Slide is pictured in blue and green color, however, talk to an AAA State of Play representative for more information about color options.
