Play Mart's Stellar Play Structure is bound to become a new favorite feature for children visiting any park, schoolyard, or daycare that has had the activity architecture installed. This commercial-grade unit is inspired by the awesome sights found in the nighttime sky. A photo panel installed into the upper walling of one of the higher platforms displays the silhouette of a child observing a celestial body. The constellation stenciling on the shade-providing roof continues the space theme. Little astronauts in training will have four different climbers to choose from. They include beginning challenges like the Lazy Loop Climber and intermediate obstacles like the Rock Wall Climber with its realistic rock-like grips. None of the climbers are necessary to use for children just wanting to reach the two open-aired slides. There is an easy ascent possible starting at the Quadra Stepper. And for youth uninterested in slides and climbers, there are built-in ground-level activities such as the music-making Chime Panel. Play Mart's Stellar Play Structure incorporates recycled plastic material in its construction, which helps keep Earth clean while kids plan their trip to the stars.
