Active play units like Play Mart's Double Rock Wall Recycled Two-Sided Panel Climber are proven beneficial additions to a playground. When children engage in rigorous freeform activities like climbing, children are unknowingly laying the foundation for good healthy habits that will continue through the remainder of their lifetimes. Kids will be more likely to embrace difficult challenges later when they recall the satisfaction they felt from overcoming a prior obstacle. This climber fits the bill perfectly. With a generous number of knobbed grips on both sides of its two walls, youth should have little trouble finding spots for their hands to grab or feet to be placed. Four stainless steel bars extending from the ground to connect at the top of the wall offer additional handholds or could be used as an altogether different type of climbing challenge. Built partially out of recycled plastic material, this Double Rock Wall will attract a lot of attention at your elementary school, urban park, or small town playground.
