The intricate metal web of circular and hexagonal shapes of the Independent Play Sunrise Climber makes for a unique and fun climber that will strengthen a child's large muscle groups and increase their wits as they move across the complex arrangement. The vertical circles offer spots for kids to place their hands and feet. They can even double as targets for kids to throw or kick balls through. The metal's unique spacing forces little ones to carefully consider their next moves, improving planning and problem-solving skills during play. The frame is built with commercial-grade steel, making it strong enough to accommodate multiple children at once. As youngsters climb and invent games together, they are nurturing lasting friendships and advancing their socialization skills. A slim design allows this climber to be placed in nearly any location in a park, childcare facility, school or church. Make it truly one-of-a-kind with any of our custom color options.
