The Freestanding Trapeze Ring is a favorite among older children because the trapeze rings swing, allowing them to use momentum to swing to the next ring. Children will have fun all day on this durably built playground climber. Jumping can be jarring to the body of a child, the side ladders improves the tradition overhead climbers because it does not require the child to jump up to reach or jump down to dismount the trapeze rings. The maximum height of this overhead climber is seven feet after it is installed, and it comes in a selection of colors. Sii follows the guidelines for playground safety on all models of their commercial playground equipment. The frame is composed of quality materials, and the trapeze rings are securely attached to the top bar with strong hangers.
